EXPERTISE

Family - Children

Despite her relatively junior level of call Kerry has a wide range of experience in public law work and is frequently instructed by local authorities, guardians, parents, interveners and other family members of children involved with Social Services. Kerry has experience across all spectrums of hearings including fact-finding hearings and final hearings in cases where issues include domestic violence, sexual and physical abuse, drug and alcohol abuse, chronic neglect and mental health issues.

In the private law arena Kerry has significant experience in the full range of disputes concerning child arrangements and related family issues as well as injunctive relief proceedings. She is regularly instructed in cases with complex issues and involving intractable contact disputes.
